---

Let's look at some different ways to use like in British English.

We can use like as an active verb which means 'to feel positive about'.

I like my dad - he's great.

We can also use to be like. This means the same as 'similar'.

I am like my dad because we both have brown hair.

Like can also mean 'such as'.

My dad enjoys many sports, like football.

Finally, we can use the expression like, like to say that two family members are the same.

Like mother, like daughter or like father, like son.
